Urbanites passing through South Bay Sunday morning might have thought at first they were seeing a DC-3 in real trouble but residents in the area said they were getting their first look at mosquitoes being bombed from the air by the twin-engined Ag-Air aircraft which operated in the eastern part of the county last year. Ag-Air owner Howard Barker, who was flying the "old reliable" of the airways, said he was laying down fog for mosquitoes for the Palm Beach County Mosquito Control District. Barker said he fogged 12,000 acres in the western part of the county Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning, putting down some 2,400 pounds of pesticide mix.

HUD approves $447,000 grant for City

The Belle Glade Community Development Program was notified Monday the city has been approved for a $447,000 grant by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to finance the second year's activities, and may be in line for an additional $322,910.

Mayor William Great said he was notified Monday by David C. Rogers, director of man Paul Rogers' office in Washington that the city has been approved for the second of six years the program is supposed to be scheduled for.

Belle Glade Community Development Program Director George Gartner said Tuesday he had not received official notification about the second year's funding. He also said there is only one item in the budget for the upcoming year which is different than what the program has already become involved in.

The transfer item, which has already been given the go-ahead by the city commission and HUD, is a new recreation building to be erected on a ten-acre plot of land the city intends to buy from the Belle Glade Housing Authority.

(The commission gave the go-ahead Monday night to purchase the ten acres for $100,000 to be paid in equal installments of $20,000 each, plus six per cent interest.

The interest had been a point of contention, with the city claiming the original agreement on time payments did not include any interest. The commission decided to go ahead and pay the interest during Monday night's session.

Gartner told the commissioners during the commission meeting he said the city is getting closer to collecting $322,910 from HUD. The money represents a surplus which the city is entitled to if the city official can be convinced the city will be its part in the Neighborhood Development Program.

NDP was phased out two years ago when the Community Development Program was put into effect.

"I think we've just worn them down," Gartner told the commissioners. "They can't prove we didn't provide our share. I believe there is a very excellent chance the City will receive the surplus NDP Grant funds."

In still another move, the commission gave the go-ahead to another plan

Gartner presented which would provide a new house to repair the 30-year old home belonging to Maner Godfrey at 537 S.W. Ninth St.

Gartner said he has found a way to get around the Truck kills 7-year old

A seven-year old Belle Glade boy was killed Monday when he ran in front of a pickup truck at South Main and Avenue E.

Dead at the scene was Rafael Sand Jr., 3, and Mrs. Rafael Sans Sr. of 519 S. Main St. No charges were brought against Nestor V. Brillas, 19, of Fort Lauderdale, who was driving the pickup which struck the child.

Police Chief Charles Goodlett said later that the boy was walking several children standing at the intersection when another truck, loaded with watermelons, went through the intersection and two or three of the melons rolled off.

Brillas told Detective Tom Walker, who worked the accident with Patrolman L.D. Grive, he had gone off the shoulder of the road to avoid the melons and just as he was driving back onto the pavement, he saw the Sams boy dash in front of him.

Goodlett said the boy may have been trying to reach the watermelons and didn't see the pickup bearing down on him.

Community Development Program prohibition against home demolitions.

Under his proposal, Godfrey would use $15,000 relocation allowance to have a pre-fabricated home built on his property after his current home is condemned and demolished.

Sugar League studies water pollution in area

A 48-foot specially built mobile trailer housing an environmental laboratory will be used at the Agricultural Research and Education Center here to take part in a $20,000 water quality study being performed for the Florida Sugar Cane League.

The field lab will be used to check the holdings of a total of eight sampling stations in various types of agricultural area drainage ditches.

Of the eight sampling sites, five will be used to check the water level, the water level as well as ground water movement and seepage.

The remaining three sites will be considered intensive testing checkpoints, where samples of water will be taken to measure the water quality as well as the five checked at the other five sites.

These three stations will be considered intensive testing checkpoints, where samples of water will be taken to measure the water quality as well as the five checked at the other five sites.

The reason for these three intensive study sites being suspended from the calendar is that the environmental scientists don't want any misinformations which could come about as a result of checking close to the banks of the canals.

A total of 12 monitoring wells have been drilled to an average depth of ten feet. Samples will be taken biweekly and will be taken with the canal water samples.

Level recorders will provide information on water level fluctuations.

As the program progresses, direct backpumping ditches to Lake Okeechobee from eight privately owned areas will be monitored at least six times over a 12-month period.

Local band cuts discs

David Lowman, a Belle Glade resident, and The Southern Lowman, a Belle Glade band recorded four songs Wednesday which are being pressed by a major label recording company for national distribution.

Lowman said he and the other four members of the band traveled to Fort Lauderdale Wednesday evening to make the recordings in the studios of SRS International Studios for Iron Horse Records.

The reason for the suspension of the recording session, Walsh went on, "is expected to be of at least a 12-month duration and the summary findings will be provided to the Water Management District on completion.

The Belle Glade Bicentennial celebration will live on past the July 3rd festival as two Bicentennial flags are flown on city flagpoles and copies of the festival program go to school libraries in the county.

Two flags purchased by the Belle Glade Bicentennial Committee were presented to the city commission Monday night with the understanding they will be flown at flagpoles located in front of City Hall and in McDonald Park for the rest of the year.

The committee also asked that one of the flags be returned at the end of the year to go into the Lawrence E. Will Museum.

The museum is one of three projects undertaken by the committee more than a year ago to mark the bicentennial of the national historical year and is located in the city library.

The commission accepted the two flags and also granted the library board the right to hire a part-time clerk to work in the museum until the end of this fiscal year.

The clerk will be paid by the library until Oct. 1 and the commission promised to look into budgeting a sum to cover the cost of replacement for new equipment.

City to stop free grass mowing

Free mowing of private property by city forces will be halted Oct. 1, the Belle Glade City Commission decided Monday night, and the city will begin enforcing an ordinance requiring owners to keep up their property or pay the city to do so.

In a motion made by Commissioner Tom Altman and adopted 4-1, with Commissioner Aubrey Farmer opposing it, the owners of property the city is now mowing will be sent questionnaires to find if they want to pay the city to continue the service.

Mowing the private lots with city equipment and personnel has been the subject of hot debate for several months, with Commissioners Altman and Ralph Kirk moving several times to get the city committed out of pocket.

When he voted for the overall motion, the idea to contact the landowners to see if they would willing pay the city a fee to cut their grass came as the result of a comment Farmer made.

"Nobody has ever contacted the property owners," Farmer said, "to see if they would pay for mowing their grass. I feel they would pay rather than let it grow up." Farmer said he was opposed to "forcing this down their throats" and questioned the other commissioners what kind of ordinance they were going to enforce.

Altman commented the city already has an ordinance which requires property owners to cut their grass before it reaches 18 inches high (City Attorney John Baker said later that the ordinance stipulates 24 inches) and all he wanted was for the city to enforce its own ordinances.

"I just know what's going to happen," Farmer said. "The town's going to be overrun with weeds and maidencane."

Farmer also said the property owners are paying taxes and that they were entitled to something other than, "police protection of a vacant lot."

Commissioner Ralph Kirk agreed the owners were paying property taxes but pointed out others were too. "Only 3 to 4 percent of the property in town is being mowed and 100 percent of the taxpayers are paying for it. That's not fair."

Mayor William Great said he felt Farmer may have found the key to the problem in contacting the property owners to see if they would willingly agree to pay the city for the service.

The discussion came as the result of a workshop session in which City Manager George Knoblock was directed to come up with a fee for cutting the grass.

Knoblock told the commission Monday he felt the city should charge $10 as a minimum charge for any lot size. Another $10 would be added for each hour after the first with a half-hour being treated as a full hour.

The city manager stressed that this $10 per hour charge wouldn't represent any profit, that it would barely cover out-of-pocket expense and would not cover the cost of replacement for new equipment.

Public Works Director John Scottie said the city is currently mowing an estimated 165 acres of private property 22 times a year for a yearly expense of at least $17,470 annually to the city.

On Friday I could hear the children singing "Oh Happy Day". School is out! On Monday, they have good luck and much success on both of his new careers.

Now the summer is here, time for the child's school to move at all times, whether at play or at school. Not to play in or near the road but go to one of the parks in the city or else remain in their back yard.

Swim here there is a life guard on hand to watch you.

Glades Central Band under the direction of George Pirtson, and the Glades Central Choir under the direction of Mrs. Walter Loeke give the members after school trip to Six Flags Over Georgia near Atlanta. The chartered Trailways bus and the drivers were so friendly and courteous the whole trip. The weather was beautiful. This was an exciting trip and everyone enjoyed themselves. After leaving the park we stopped at Davis Brothers and each person ate a good breakfast. A few of the members were also given a free meal at the piano while there. The tour left Glades Central band room Friday night about 9:30 p.m. and returned on Sunday about 11 a.m. The two choirmen who accompanied the band were Mrs. Maude Vereen and Mrs. Mattie Leeland.

The Children's Choir of Mt. Zion AME Church observed their anniversary Sunday at which time their director, Mrs. Thomas Montgomery gave out trophies and plaques to members of the choir for a job well done. The Rev. Dr. W. E. Jones, Salmon, their sponsor, who has been ill, and is still confined at home received a plaque from the children of the choir expressing their love for her. How good it is to be remembered.

Congratulations to all of the seniors on Friday night and to those who needed a little extra push, I say, "Hold your head up and continue to reach your goal."

Mrs. Harvey Poole and the Rev. Charles Robinson will be attending the general conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Churches in Atlanta, Ga.

News has been received that Anthony Williams, the son of Herman Williams and the late Johnnie Roth Williams, will be getting married on July 3. Anthony was the former member of the Raider football team and has been drafted to play with the Buffalo Bills of New York. We wish him good luck and much success on both of his new careers.

Miss Karen Wilcox of Atlanta, Georgia, will be attending a leadership workshop this week from the Corinth Methodist Episcopal Church in Atlanta, Rev. Louis Jay, pastor.

Thought - If you want to accomplish anything, you have to set a goal. And then you have to do something about it. The goal is the beginning. Be sure to stick to the end. In order to obtain a goal, one must be motivated to do something. If you want to reach the top in the business world, start where you are, determine what method needed and go after it. If your goal is spiritual then set your personal life in order that people can see example that your life is holy. If you want to make money, set that goal and work to reach it. Even when we are working for God.

Colonel Reid Clifton

FHP station to be named for Colonel Clifton

The new $128,000 Florida Highway Patrol-Driver License office under construction at Pahokee will be named for Colonel Reid Clifton, retired Director of the Patrol, it was announced by Ralph Davis, Executive Director, Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles.

In 1976 Legislature unanimously passed a special act designating the facility as the Reid Clifton Building, according to Davis. Colonel Clifton started his outstanding law enforcement career in Pahokee as a city policeman. He retired as commander of the Patrol in 1972 after 32 years of service. He is now Insurance Safety Coordinator in the Department of Insurance.

Colonel Clifton played a major role in securing needed additional land for the new office, including a $50,000 donation from the City of Pahokee toward purchase of the property.

The new facility is scheduled for completion in September when an appropriate dedication ceremony will be held.

The odds on a coin falling heads are 50 to 1. The times are so great that it would take a million men tossing coins 10 times a minute and 12 hours a week, and then it would happen only once every nine centuries!

Provide children a love of books - library says

Parents want to provide the best of everything for their children. One of the very best gifts a parent can provide is a love for books and encouragement to read.

Reading for fun during summer vacation puts skills learned during the school year to use. Teachers say that reading during the summer helps children to remember more of what they learned and prepares them for the next school year.

The Summer Reading Program at the Belle Glade Municipal Library begins Monday, June 21 and lasts until July 15. Children in kindergarten through second grade may participate on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at 1 p.m. Third, fourth, fifth and sixth graders may come to the programs on Tuesdays and Thursdays at

In addition to winning prizes for reading a certain number of books, a child can earn chances on a drawing for two special prizes — a monster lamp and a workbench. For every five books read, the participant will receive a chance in the drawing.

In keeping with the Bicentennial theme, the first program for both age groups will be a puppet show, "Happy Birthday to Us," about Paul Revere's famous ride, and the help he received from his faithful Concord. Successive programs will include movies, music, games, stories, crafts and a party on the last day.

Children can check out their own books if they have a library card. If a child has never had a card before, he must be at least six years old and one of the parents must sign the application. Lost cards may be replaced after payment of a small fee.

The library has parents will bring their children to get cards and take advantage of the Summer Reading Program.

HRS says Florida pays less in welfare benefits than most Florida pays less in welfare benefits than 41 of the 50 states, say Health and Rehabilitation Services officials who administer the programs.

Current monthly payments to recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) average $40.28 compared to a national average of $70 per month. Several states pay as much as $100.

Florida bases payments on meeting 74 percent of a recipient's needs, however, the 1978 Legislature appropriated an emergency increase to raise that to about 80 percent of need, increasing checks by $2 or $3 per recipient.

Officials of HRS have consistently urged lawmakers to raise payment levels above mere existence levels, however, in a year of tight revenues like this one a larger nation-wide increase was not forthcoming. Nationwide increases in welfare payments during the past year averaged about 10 percent — yet Florida held its total to 5.4 percent increase, placing HRS among AFDC recipients by 51 percent.

Caseloads were reduced significantly by cracking down on fraudulent application procedures, tightening verification procedures, chucking the federal simplified eligibility procedure and through intensified training for staff workers.

The current caseload for AFDC is about 250,918 persons. This includes 186,818 children and 64,000 parents or adult caretakers whose needs are met under the budget. Besides cash payments these persons are also entitled to a full range of Medicaid benefits ranging from diagnostic screening to hospitalization, medical services and drugs.

I understand that the Florida Bar has decided to campaign to get more lawyers to run for the Legislature.

Now, I for one am not sure that this particularly will make this state any more unique. Unless, of course, it's because future laws will be more hairbrained and totally confusing than they are now.

Mark Twain once noted that one never sees a lawyer with his hands in his pockets. They're always in someone else's. Possibly an unfair description, but, it is a determination you will have to make for yourself.

We now have enough words, sentences and paragraphs on things as simple as "It is against the law to steal a bicycle" to fill a book as large as "Gone With the Wind". Combine that with thousands of other laws and you've got the answer to the paper shortage.

I met with a barrister named H. Smith Williams who has taken the call of the Bar to help him and is trying to decide whether to run initially for the House of Representatives or squander his constituents' money in the Senate.

"He agreed to discuss legislation he would like to see enacted if elected."

"Firstly and foremostly," he stated "I would pass a law that would make conviction of the crime of hanging snuff can lids on citrus trees to scare away birds completely dependent on whether or not the accused's bigger brother who has been determined to be older than the defendant."

I could understand that.

"Secondly I would pass a law making it unlawful to own a dog, regardless of pedigree that thinks it's a chicken." He paused a second to reflect "unless, of course, the accused could prove he makes less than ten thousand dollars a year in which case he would have need of the eggs in order to feed his family which must include at least twelve members, not counting the accused."

I could understand that. A'man must feed his large family as best he can.

"I would legislate to insure the accused is mentally and socially stable before he's convicted," he said.

"Like how?" I asked.

"For instance, a female bank robber would be treated as a misdemeanor offender if it were determined that she was an unwanted child?" he said.

"An unwanted child?" I questioned.

"Yes" he said "like if they were hoping for a refrigerator."

I could, understand that. Anyone who was told all her life she should have been a refrigerator is not responsible for her actions.

Other actions I would actively work toward passage would be a law against smoking in public places unless one has the means for lighting his cigarette, a law against public drunkenness unless the accused is under the age of five or over the age of eighty, the improper usage of firearms, such as firing them, the total abolition of discrimination in fishing, you know, you can't just go after bass alone - that's rank discrimination."

I asked him "Will you continue to practice law during your tenure as a legislator?"

"Sure" he answered "The pay is terrible. But if we get enough lawyers making the laws just think of all the loopholes and such that we can write into the books that would serve to get our private clients off the hook. We defense lawyers would never lose a case. So, the few weeks involved and the inconvenience of going to the Capitol during that time could prove to be very profitable in the long run."

I could understand that.

Three cheers for two good ideas.....

When a federally funded program gets not one, but two new wrinkles nobody has ever seen before, and both of those ideas come from one man in a town the size of Belle Glade, it's time to sit up and take notice.

HUD officials in Jacksonville say they've never heard of any other city attempting to make sure renovated homes in the Community Development Program stay in good shape by teaching the owners of the homes how to take care of minor repairs around the house.

We haven't either.

There are bound to be some pessimists around who'll say such a course is a waste of taxpayers' money, but the way we figure it, if even a few of us homeowners having their homes rehabilitated under the program refuse to allow their homes to get rundown again, it will have been well worth the effort.

The course was basically the idea of Belle Glade Community Development Program Director George Gorman with lots of input from other people like Mayor William Green, Olds Central Adult and Community Schools Coordinator Lee Young and the Citizens Advisory Committee.

Gartner also found a loophole in federal guidelines which allows the program to replace homes in particularly bad shape, rather than, as in one local case, spend $18,500 to turn a 30-year old house into a 30-year old house.

Both of these plans are innovative and federal officials in Jacksonville and Atlanta are watching closely to see what the end results will be.

We feel everyone involved, including the city commission and HUD, who are giving the green light to both ideas, are to be congratulated.

To Drug or Not to Drug

What is Your Question?

by j.p. feld

Question: Why do people use drugs? J.E.F.

Answer: In our High Schools a recent poll taken revealed that 44 per cent of the youth experimented with drugs. Some take "peer pressure"! Some take drugs seeking to escape from reality, hence the term "escapism".

Question: Rev. Feld - Do you feel fewer people are involved in drugs presently? G.L.

Answer: Recent statistics show that drugs are on a steady increase at an alarming rate. The F.B.I. Uniform Crime Reports

CRACKER CRUMBS

BY DEAN JONES

Well, I went fishing again Sunday and found out one more time the biggest fish in Lake Okeechobee was me.

Course that wouldn't have been true if I went gone but that's only because I wouldn't have been the biggest fish out of the lake.

It's something like the seven year locust. I'll go fishing and seven years later I just gotta go out and prove to myself and the world one more time I'm not a fisherman... which is weird because snaffling fried fish out of a plate comes so easily.

Actually, what I need is an early warning system because when I woke up Sunday morning I had no more intention of going on the water than I had of chewing on a mouthful of rusty fish hooks for breakfast.

Either idea would have seemed equally ridiculous.

But when I stepped over to see Jack for a minute and found him and Jeff sitting primed and on ready to turn the afternoon into a flaky St. Valentine's Day Massacre I have to admit I caught the fever too. (I haven't had my fishing vaccination yet this year.)

So I'm gonna bowfow gear off of Jack and Jeff (real names this time. There ain't no innocent bystanders in this saga of sorrow) and we all trundled off to see Jeff's pappy-in-law, who is supposed to be the ace-born-he-coon of bass fishermen in the area.

Now, right there, we had fair and reasonable warning anyone with a prudent mind might have considered.

The ace-born-he-coon shilly-shallied around for an hour or so and finally allowed he didn't think he'd go.

Weather weren't right, thank you.

Well, we allowed the weather did too look right. Turned out the weather was indeed marvelous enough. The sun was shining, there was a two-foot swell and a balmy 55-mile an hour breeze... all of which would have been fine on the Atlantic but we were on Lake Okeechobee.

Anyway, we finally found the hole for fishing, as I believe the experts call it, right at the mouth of Micah Cut or whatever. That was after crawling through a few hundred miles of pepper grass having a good ol' time watching the kicker prop gettng fouled with grass.

Now, I may not be much of a fisherman but Jack and Jeff supposedly try their hand at it on a more or less regular basis and the two of them had gone out before I'd met them that day to beat up their tackle boxes with a new supply of artificial feathers, streamers, fish, worms and other look-alike fish feed, along with a few silver spoons designed to feed a fish hook snack to a mess of bass.

All of which didn't do us a damn bit of good because they'd left every bit of it back at the marina.

We did have the lures on the rods we'd brought along, combined with a tackle box stuffed with three rusty hooks, a pair of pliers, a can of oil, the remnants of a three-month old ham and cheese sandwich and what was left of two lures. Oh, yeah, there was a church key too.

Actually, we didn't find out about all that until Jeff had climbed back in the boat from pushing us out of a mess of moccasin-infested water weeds (Just nose the boat into those weeds, Jack said, she'll stop there and we can all three fish off the back.)

There was one encouraging thing we noticed right away as we started drifting up the cut. Man, there were fish - rolling, striking, jumping, slapping and everything but telling us in plain English to "grab me, man, I'm Charlie and I got taste."

We didn't have much but we proceeded forthwith to use that little with gusto, looking forward to a frying pan full of sizzling goodies and a couple of fourteen-pound trophies apiece.

Jeff got the first bite. I think it was about his third cast; he whipped his rod back, flung it forward with a neat twich of his wrist and I yelled bloody murder.

Jeff said later he just knew he'd been struck by the biggest junker in the Lake from the way his rod was bent. I'm still trying to figure out how he could've hooked a fish which would've made his rod bend backwards.

Besides, my mutilated back told me different. I don't know what the heck Jeff was using a shark ganghook on bass for and after being eviscerated from the rear, I wasn't asking any questions except where the nearest mortuary was. I knew it was too late for the hospital.

What with the muscles across my back and shoulders being shredded by the harpoon that almost took Micah Cut or whatever. That was after crawling through a few hundred miles of pepper grass having a good ol' time watching the kicker prop getting fouled with grass.

Well, after I had arm wrestled that real for about 27 minutes, I realized the bass, hook and all, had been swallowed by the biggest grand-daddy junker of them all.

Well, it was nip and tuck all the way, with water foaming white, then turning pink from the blood that 14-foot mako shark was losing and just about the time my arms were wore to a frazzle, what with my injured back and all, I was almost glad when the line went slack and let the bent-double rod snap back into a straight line.

I swear to God that two-ounce bluegill was laughing as he swam back to his bed.

Letters to the editor

TO THE EDITOR:

The Belle Glade Bicentennial Committee takes this opportunity to thank the hundreds of people who participated in the bicentennial activities of May 31, 1976.

That memorable day of celebration would not have been possible without the generous donations of time and money from citizens and local businesses.

The completion of the Lawrence E. Will Museum, the erection of the statue commemorating the hurricane stricken pioneers, the exciting and colorful parade and the huge barbecue were ambitious projects which the community undertook with great enthusiasm and pursued diligently until the final overwhelming success of our Bicentennial Day Celebration.

Our sincere appreciation to all those who worked,

gave and participated.

Fishing was good last week

Fishing has been good this past week according to Mordie Legg of Slim's Fish Camp, who is filling in for vacationing Nan Corbin.

Beth Lou Romans came in Monday with a 6 pound 2 ounce bass from Winnie's Cove, caught on a silver Devil's Horse. Her husband, Sam, who was here last week and Friday, came in with his 6 pound 12 ounce bass.

On Tuesday, Larry Underwood had seven nice bass, the largest being 7 pounds 8 ounces.

Saturday was a good day for several fishermen. J. Y.

Dell and his son, Johnny, caught 60 shellcrackers on live worms. Bob Osborn had 10 bass with the largest going 9 pounds. Darrell Mathis and Findley Pate caught three bass and John Hundley and his son caught 13 bass.

The Belle Glade Bassmasters Tournament Sunday was won by John and Jimmy Kelly, who caught 45 pounds of bass between them. Stevens, Gill and John Davis with 21 pounds 8 ounces and Darrell Mathis and Findley Pate took third with 15 pounds 14 ounces.
